We have found that having a phone contact system like this works well.

By having a master list with key contact people identified, it enables the Key Man to know who they need to get in touch with when a project becomes available.

- You will need a Foreman's list so that the key leader will be able to take charge of whatever the project is.
- Then mobilize men into teams of five with a team captain for each team. Our experience shows that if you keep the teams the same for an entire year, you will witness relationships build and deepen.
- The Team Coordinator phones all the team captains and they phone their teams for the men to be mobilized when a project is available.
